

NLA Decoder Output

Activation 0 (llvll = 118.5)

Fanfic blog tone with quirky, informal TV show dialogue post, suggesting a blogger responding to DW's emotional roller-coaster moments about Kate's return to WWE.

The phrase "And the tweets are saying 'Lana's new rivalry' and 'new' implies an incomplete list or quoted phrase, likely referencing the Salem storyline or another show element, possibly "new baby" or "problems."

Final token "new" is mid-phrase ("new"), part of a quoted attribution or label sequence (" 'new..."), strongly expecting a noun like "baby storyline," "evil queen," "stories," "the council," or "my wife" continuing the intrigue context.

Activation 1 (llvll = 120.3)

Blog-style literary/artist Twitter exchange with informal humor tone discussing a "social media scandal" about a historian's unintentional offense.

The sentence structure "One person is trying to defend/contain the frenzy, claiming the person who made" continues a list of escalating defenses ("Someone says this woman didn't mean to..."), with the specific accusation implying a genuine, but exaggerated, mistake.

Final token "made" ends mid-clause ("if someone who made"), part of a contrasting argument clause ("not that someone who claimed this person didn't realize..."), expecting "a simple mistake" or "a genuine error and is now apologizing" or "a single unintentional gaffe."